FORM OF GOVERNMENT

Constitution

What is the basic source of law? Describe the scope of, and limitations on, government power relevant to the regulation of lobbying and government relations.

Social participation in the decision-making process is based on the individual rights and guarantees described in the Constitution enacted in 1988, which include freedom of speech and assembly, and the right to petition. The latter establishes that every citizen may submit a plea to the government to advocate for their rights and stand against illegalities and abuse of power. These individual rights enable all citizens to exercise free democratic participation in the decision-making process, which is related to lobbying and government relations.

These rights are in harmony with the bases of the Brazilian Constitution, which establishes a democratic, republican and federative nation, where all power belongs to the people, who exercise it by electing representatives and their appointees.

There have been no recent and important developments in the Brazilian Constitution or laws regarding lobbying regulation and government relations. This activity has not yet been specifically regulated.

In December 2021, the executive branch sent to Congress a bill that intends to regulate lobbying activity (House Bill 4,391/21). The proposal reinforces the legitimacy of the activity, establishes general rules of conduct with a focus on transparency and lists punishable misconduct.

On a separate front, on various occasions, the Speaker of the House has expressed his position in favour of regulating the activity.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Legislative system

Describe the legislative system as it relates to lobbying.

Brazil adopts a presidential system of government. Elections take place every four years for the executive and legislative representatives.

The federal parliament (the National Congress) is bicameral, composed of the House of Representatives and the Senate. The main role of Congress is to legislate, but it also oversees the executive branch, and, for that purpose, it has the support of an auditing government body.

The executive branch is composed of many public agencies, which have the autonomy to regulate legislation approved by Congress. The Cabinet can also enact executive orders that enter into force as soon as they are published and are valid for 60 days (and are renewable for the same period). To become law, Congress must vote on the executive orders.

In the public sphere, there is a strong constitutional system of checks and balances in place. In addition, state and municipal legislative bodies may create legislation according to their constitutional attributions, which means that local lobbying is also relevant.

The possibility of Brazil adopting a semi-parliamentary system is currently under discussion. This system would lead congress-people to a leading position in the decision-making process and the dynamics of lobbying would certainly be impacted.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

National subdivisions

Describe the extent to which a legislative or rule-making authority relevant to lobbying practice also exists at regional, provincial or municipal level.

The government has a complex structure, with autonomous state and municipal bodies for decision-making and legislating. A long list of responsibilities is established in the Constitution regarding federal, state and municipal matters, some of which are assigned at more than one level. Municipal legislative authority includes tax, urban planning, public safety, sports, and culture and recreation, among others.

Although not regulated, lobbying and government relations take place locally owing to the constitutional bases for advocacy.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Consultation process

Does the legislative process at national or subnational level include a formal consultation process? What opportunities or access points are typically available to influence legislation?

All bills of law must be assessed by the House of Representatives and the Senate. In both houses, bills are submitted to thematic committees and assessed by an appointed rapporteur who must issue a report for approval, rejection or adjustment of the bill, which is confirmed by the Committee. The plenary of the houses may also assess the bill depending on the type, and the priorities and themes to be voted on.

Rule-making power is also granted to the President (Chief of the Executive Office), who is responsible for sanctioning (or vetoing) and enacting most bills. Additionally, the executive branch may submit bills of law to be voted on by Congress. The Supreme Court also plays a role in rule-making because of the erga omnes effect of most of its decisions and to increase judicial activism.

In general, the Brazilian legislative process includes phases of public participation, such as public consultations, public hearings and mechanisms for presenting legal suggestions. The participation takes place mainly in the legislative houses and via official websites. The Constitution also allows for citizens to propose bills, as long as the proposal comes from at least 1 per cent of voters in various areas of the country (which amounts to approximately 1.5 million signatures).

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Judiciary

Is the judiciary deemed independent and co-equal? Are judges elected or appointed? If judges are elected, are campaigns financed through public appropriation or candidate fundraising?

The judiciary in Brazil is independent and coequal. It is composed of trial courts, appellate courts and the higher courts (the Superior Court of Justice and the Supreme Court). These courts rule on civil and criminal law matters. In addition, Brazil has three specialised judicial systems for ruling on labour, electoral and military cases.

Trial judges are not elected but recruited as a result of their performance in specific high-level career exams.

A different system applies to the higher courts, where members are appointed by the President according to a list of eligible professionals selected by the appellate court. These lists are mainly composed of trial judges, but a quota is reserved for career prosecutors and lawyers.

All judges of the Superior Court of Justice are appointed by the President from a list of judges, lawyers and public prosecutors.

Regarding the Supreme Court, the President may appoint anyone aged between 35 and 65 with exceptional legal knowledge and an immaculate reputation.

There are two different legislative proposals intending to change these rules: Constitutional Amendment Bill 159/2019 seeks to change back the age of the justices' mandatory retirement from 75 to 70 years old; and Constitutional Amendment Bill 32/2021 means to increase the maximum age of appointees from 65 to 70.

REGULATION OF LOBBYING

General

Is lobbying self-regulated by the industry, or is it regulated by the government, legislature or an independent regulator? What are the regulator's powers? Who may issue guidance on lobbying? What powers of investigation does the regulator have? What are the regulators' or other officials' powers to penalise violators?

Lobbying is not regulated in Brazil. The activity is performed on the grounds of article 5, XXXIV, sub-paragraph (a) of the Constitution, which grants everyone the right to represent their interests and to advocate against illegalities and abuse of power. The Constitutional right of petition ensures that every citizen and sector has their demands and pleas assessed by the government, which indirectly confers on everyone the right to lobby. As such, although no legislation in Brazil regulates lobbying itself, several rules seek to set the parameters for public-private sector interaction. These rules, combined with the right to petition the government, are understood as the framework for lobbying in Brazil.

The main binding rules for lobbyists in Brazil are:

- the Code of Conduct of the High Administration;
- the Clean Company Act (Law No. 12,846/2013);
- the Electoral Code and Campaign Funding Rules;
- the Internal Rules of the House of Representatives and the Senate;
- Law No. 8429/92 – the Administrative Misconduct Law; and
- the Penal Code, in particular articles 321, 332 and 333, respectively on the defence of private interests as a lawyer, influence dealing and active corruption.

When discussing lobbying regulation, it is important to note the role played by Operation Car Wash (a criminal investigation carried out by the Federal Police of Brazil that began as an investigation into money laundering and expanded to corruption at state-controlled oil company Petrobras and other private companies) in raising awareness about lobbying malpractice and placing discussions about transparency, legitimacy and lobbying activities on the national agenda daily.

Although the aim to regulate lobbying has only been a focus recently, it has been on the agenda for Congress for over 20 years, when the first bill to regulate the activity was submitted to the Senate. Since then, several bills have been proposed and the one leading the legislative process with the strongest support is Bill 1202/07. It is currently on the floor to be voted by the plenary of the House. In 2019, Bill 1202/07 was docketed on the daily agenda more than 10 times but has not yet been voted on.

Another direct consequence of lobbying awareness is the increasing number of private associations created to unite lobbyists and discuss the regulation of the activity. Most of these associations have a binding internal code of conduct that may serve as an informal marker of good conduct in the market. This voluntary membership may be interpreted as tentative self-regulation.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Definition

Is there a definition or other guidance as to what constitutes lobbying?

There is no legal definition of lobbying, though, in February 2018, lobbyists were recognised by the former Ministry of Labour under the title of Institutional and Government Relations professionals. This recognition did not aim to define or regulate the professionals; it only featured to encompass these professionals in the Ministry of Labour list of professional activities.

In Brazil, the term 'lobbying' has assumed a depreciatory meaning, related to the act of wrongdoing. Consequently, all draft and issued bills have avoided the expression. It is more common in Brazil for lobby professionals to be named as both government relations or institutional and government relations professionals.

In Congress and in the executive branch, some definitions are under discussion and may indicate how the subject might be regulated in the future. There are over 10 bills in Congress that propose regulating lobbying. Bill 1202/07 is the leading bill and defines lobbying based on two different and complementary concepts:

- Government relations is considered the participation of interest groups in the legislative decision-making process, which comprises monitoring, assessing and disclosing acts and procedures related to policy decisions. Any individual, private company or association, public entity, or agency may practise government relations when they are not the decision makers in the process and are aiming to:
  - reduce economic, social, institutional or operational risks;
  - provide a more balanced model of policy or public policy;
  - monitor the legislative and the regulatory process in Congress and the executive branch;
  - subsidise the decision-making process with facts, data and important information; and
  - highlight unconstitutional acts and faults in legislative technique.
- Representation of interests is defined as a person sharing their views and opinions, or those of a third party (as previously authorised), with decision makers.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Registration and other disclosure

Is there voluntary or mandatory registration of lobbyists? How else is lobbying disclosed?

There is no mandatory registration for lobbyists in Brazil, but there is voluntary registration in Congress for lobbyists who represent public agencies or civil entities recognised and authorised by the Senate or the House of Representatives' board of directors. This register is intended to facilitate access to Congress. It does not entail any disclosure to the entities and professionals accredited. Each federal body or civil entity is limited to two representatives per House. Only associations, trade unions and entities with national representatives have the right to register their representatives in Congress. Recently, the Senate system changed so that only government officials may register.

Bill 1202/07 does not require lobbyists to register, and it establishes a minimum disclosing rule for lobbyists to name who they are representing when engaging with politicians or public officials.

Activities subject to disclosure or registration*What communications must be disclosed or registered?

As there is no lobbying registration in Brazil, there are no rules for lobbying disclosure. It has become increasingly common for lobbyists to request formal meetings with congress-people, but it is also still commonplace to see citizens and representatives engaging with congress-people in the hall passages, and at events and committees that take place in Congress.

The same does not apply to the executive branch because of the rules enforced by article 11 of Law No. 12,813/13. According to this Law, directors must make their daily agenda available on the internet, indicating who attended all the meetings held on that day. In addition, Decree No. 4334/02 provides that meetings with any government official must be requested by email or fax, disclosing the association, company or individual requesting the meeting, the name of each private-sector representative and the subject matter to be addressed. The meetings must be attended by at least two public officials and a record of the meeting must be registered afterwards.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Entities and persons subject to lobbying rules*Which entities and persons are caught by the disclosure rules?

There are no disclosure rules for lobbying as there is no distinction between lobbying activities practised on behalf of third parties or an individual's interests, or even by non-profit entities. Disclosure rules may be enacted in the future, jointly with a lobbying regulation, as there are no constitutional rules forbidding this disclosure. The Brazilian Bar Association's Code of Conduct, however, exempts lawyers from disclosing confidential information related to their clients and contracts.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Lobbyist details*What information must be registered or otherwise disclosed regarding lobbyists and the entities and persons they act for? Who has responsibility for registering the information?

Brazil does not regulate lobbying. As a consequence, lobbyists do not need to disclose information about their services, engagement, clients or finances. Bill 4,391/21 seeks to establish the obligation to share information mainly with regards to meetings with government officials.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Content of reports*When must reports on lobbying activities be submitted, and what must they include?

There is no lobbying regulation in Brazil. Therefore, lobbyists are not required to report their activities, earnings or engagements. The same applies to companies and associations that enlist lobbying services.

The main proposal in Congress Bill 1202/07 does not mandate disclosure of lobbying activities. It establishes voluntary registration for lobbying professionals but does not go into details of which procedures will be required for certification and whether disclosure will be part of it.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Financing of the registration regime

How is the registration system funded?

There is no financing system for lobbying registration as there is no mandatory registration for lobbyists in Brazil. The only registration available for lobbyists are two separate systems implemented in the House of Representatives and in the Senate to simplify access to these houses, but it is free of charge.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Public access to lobbying registers and reports

Is access to registry information and to reports available to the public?

There are no disclosure rules for lobbying in Brazil. Therefore, there is no data regarding registry information and reports on lobbying activities to be released to the public. Upon request, the House and Senate registration systems will disclose the entities registered in their files, but not the name of those representing them.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Code of conduct

Is there a code of conduct that applies to lobbyists and their practice?

Lobbying is not regulated in Brazil and therefore does not have a specific code of conduct. Nevertheless, several norms that regulate political agents and public officials also apply to lobbyists. When combined, all these rules result in a framework that is mandatory for lobbyists in Brazil.

For instance, the Code of Conduct of the High Administration is an indication of the limits imposed by the legislature on the private and public sectors about dispensing gifts and financing events, lunches and trips. The Clean Company Act imposes stricter sanctions on private companies for actions carried out against the government by introducing strict liability for private companies. All procedures related to the legislative process are described in the Internal Rules of each house of Congress. In addition, Law No. 8429/92 addresses the actions that are considered administrative misdemeanours and the Penal Code prescribes crimes related to public-private interaction.

Most private associations of lobbyists have a binding code of conduct for their members. Bill 4,391/21 also encourages them to have one.

Media

Are there restrictions in broadcast and press regulation that limit commercial interests' ability to use the media to influence public policy outcomes?

Brazil does not have specific media regulations on lobbying. There are broad limitations, and commercial interests' use of the media to influence public policy outcomes is not specifically addressed.

Brazilian consumer law establishes limits on all marketing campaigns, such as the prohibition of misleading and offensive advertising. Confusing consumers' perception of products, etc, through advertising is also prohibited.

The media is self-regulated, and the National Council for Advertising Self-Regulation (CONAR) is responsible for creating and enforcing advertising-related rules. CONAR Resolutions do not address the influence of propaganda on public policy outcomes.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

POLITICAL FINANCE

General

How are political parties and politicians funded in your jurisdiction?

In Brazil, there are three pieces of legislation that establish the framework for political parties, campaigning and elections:

- the Electoral Code (Law No. 4,737/1965) regulates the right to vote and election for office, how elections will take place, and the role of the electoral judicial system, and prescribes electoral crimes;
- the Political Parties Act (Law No. 9,096/1995) establishes the parameters for political parties' by-laws and practices (the parties determine their by-laws); it also determines how the parties will be funded; and
- Law No. 9,504/1997 establishes the rules for electoral campaigns, including requirements for candidates to run and to form coalitions, funding, accountability and campaign advertising.

Political parties are mainly publicly funded by the Special Fund for Financial Assistance to Political Parties (the Partisan Fund) and the Special Fund for Campaign Financing that receives money from the general budget of the Federal Administration. The distribution of these resources is made according to each party's parliamentary representation.

A different framework is applied concerning campaign contributions. In broad terms, individuals may contribute to electoral campaigns up to a limit of 10 per cent of their annual income before the election year, and legal entities are no longer authorised to make donations.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Registration of interests

Must parties and politicians register or otherwise declare their interests? What interests, other than travel, hospitality and gifts, must be declared?

All political parties' revenue and expenses must be annually reported for judicial review. If accounts are rejected or not correctly declared, the electoral justice system may apply different levels of sanctions.

During their terms, house representatives are entitled to some allowances and reimbursement of expenses, such as transportation, accommodation, telephone expenses, postal services, maintenance costs of parliamentary offices in support of parliamentary activity, food expenses, security services and use of consultancies.

Senators also have a monthly allowance to spend during their terms or are reimbursed for those expenses. Expenses including medical and dental care, accommodation, travel tickets or leasing of aircraft are covered by the Senate if they are correctly reported by senators.

These interests must be declared to the respective house of Congress and made public to all citizens.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Contributions to political parties and officials

Are political contributions or other disbursements to parties and political officials limited or regulated? How?

Political contributions and other disbursements are highly regulated in Brazil. The 1988 Constitution determines in article 17, section 3 that political parties will be entitled to resources from the Partisan Fund and will receive the benefit of free access to television and radio broadcasting. These rules were changed in October 2017 by Constitutional Amendment 97 establishing the minimum threshold for political parties to benefit from these resources (the barrier clause). These rules, which came into force for the first time in the 2018 general elections and will be phased in gradually until full implementation in 2030, are as follows:

- parties must have obtained at least 3 per cent of the valid votes in the previous elections, which must be spread across a minimum of one-third of the federation states and have at least 2 per cent of valid votes in each of these states; and
- parties must have elected a minimum of 15 federal house representatives spread across at least one-third of the federal states. Parties that fail to meet this threshold will still be entitled to run and elect candidates but will not benefit from the Partisan Fund and the free television and radio exposure.

Partisan Fund resources derive mainly from the federal budget but also from the collection of penalty fines applied to those who breach the Electoral Code. Additionally, individuals may also make private donations to the Partisan Fund as long as they are earmarked and traceable. The distribution of fund resources is made according to each party's parliamentary representation.

Law 9,096 of 1995 determines what expenses may be financed by Partisan Fund resources, such as administrative costs of the party headquarters, personnel and campaigns. In September 2019, Law 13,877 made a few changes to extend the list of allowed expenses, which now include legal and accountancy fees.

In addition to financial funding, political parties are entitled under the Constitution to free television and radio broadcasting. The counterpart to this indirect public funding comes from tax waivers granted to broadcasting companies. The minutes allocated to each party are directly related to the number of congress-people with mandates. Where party coalitions are admitted (this is now limited to executive office positions), their television and radio broadcasting may be aggregated.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Sources of funding for political campaigns

Describe how political campaigns for legislative positions and executive offices are financed.

The electoral legal framework is established in Brazil by Law No. 9,504/1997, which has been modified many times.

Until 2016, both individuals and private entities were allowed to contribute to political campaigns, with different contribution caps. There used to be a contribution limit of 2 per cent of a legal entity's income and a limit of 10 per cent of an individual's annual income for contribution.

In an effort towards more transparency and less corruption, changes were made to restrict campaign donations coming from legal entities. On 17 September 2015, the Supreme Court, having been called upon by the Brazilian Bar Association, ruled that campaign contributions coming from private legal entities were unconstitutional and would no longer be allowed. The ruling went into effect immediately. On 29 September 2015, Congress approved the ruling, and the Executive Office enacted new legislation reinforcing the prohibition of campaign donations by private legal entities.

In addition to individuals' contribution limit of 10 per cent of their incomes, to avoid multimillionaire candidates from having an unlimited advantage over others, changes to the Electoral Code carried out by Law 13,878 of October 2019 established that contributions from candidates to their campaigns must have an additional limit of 10 per cent of the total campaign expenditure.

In 2017, other changes in campaign funding were approved by Congress to promote amendments to the Constitution (Amendment 97 of 2017) and Law No. 9,504/1997. Among these changes, Law No. 13,487/2017 created the Special Fund for Campaign Financing (the Campaign Fund). Unlike the Partisan Fund, which finances the activities of established political parties, the new Campaign Fund finances electoral campaigns. It is also subsidised by the federal budget and distributed among parties. It was created to fill the gap of private entities' campaign contributions.

In summary, the current legal framework:

- allows individuals to contribute to electoral campaigns up to a limit of 10 per cent of their income;
- allows candidates to contribute to their electoral campaigns up to a limit of 10 per cent of the total campaign expenditure;
- allows foreigners (individuals) to contribute to electoral campaigns as long as the funds are originated in Brazil;
- prohibits legal entities from contributing to political campaigns; and
- establishes the Campaign Fund to help finance electoral campaigns.

Although it is possible to argue that private-sector interference in the results of the election may have diminished – at least officially – there is no clear evidence that more transparency or less corruption came out of the new legislation. Allegations of undue interference by private companies in social media campaigning put at stake the fair use of political tools. Another consequence of changes to campaign funding legislation is the unbalance caused by multibillionaire donors. As in Brazil individual campaign contribution is not a tradition, as soon as private entity donations were outlawed a few individual donors stood out and created an imbalance in interests being represented in Congress.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Lobbyist participation in fundraising and electioneering

Describe whether registration as a lobbyist triggers any special restrictions or disclosure requirements with respect to candidate fundraising.

Although admitted as a practice under the constitutional right to petition, lobbying is not yet regulated in Brazil and registration is not mandatory (or even a voluntary common practice). Therefore, there are no specific rules as to how lobbyists must observe fundraising and electioneering limits. The rules applicable to lobbyists will be the same as those applicable to citizens in general.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Independent expenditure and coordination

How is parallel political campaigning independent of a candidate or party regulated?

According to article 14, paragraph 3, item V of the Constitution, among other requirements, political candidates must be affiliated with a political party to run for election.

However, the matter of independently running for a political position is pending a judicial decision by the Supreme Court. The above-mentioned constitutional rule is being questioned in the face of the American Convention on Human Rights (the Pact of San José), which limits the requirements for candidates to run for political elections and does not include in the list the condition of political affiliation. According to the arguments brought to the Supreme Court, the Pact of San José should prevail over the Constitution if it is more beneficial to citizens.

Concerning parallel campaigning to support or oppose a candidate or political party, the practice would not only be unusual in Brazil but is also likely to be considered as indirect campaigning by the Superior Electoral Court, which may fall into the category of forbidden benefits.

Electoral campaigns made via the internet, which includes all types of social networks, such as websites, blogs, WhatsApp and email, were authorised for the 2018 elections. All individuals may campaign using the internet, as long as its content is not supported by payment. This restriction does not apply to official campaigns, in which a Brazilian internet supplier can be paid to boost campaign contents to promote a candidate or party, but never to undermine other candidates. Fines will be applied in cases of non-compliance.

ETHICS AND ANTI-CORRUPTION

Gifts, travel and hospitality

Describe any prohibitions, limitations or disclosure requirements on gifts, travel or hospitality that legislative or executive officials may accept from the public.

Brazilian legislation has many applicable provisions on this topic. Most legislation forbids public officials from receiving gifts, transportation, accommodation, compensation or any other favours, and accepting an invitation for luncheons, dinners, parties and other social events. Public officials may take part in workshops, conferences or similar events, as long as the organisers do not have a particular interest in decisions to be taken by them, and that the amount of payment and travel expenses are made public. The two general exceptions to this are: if the giver is a family member or personal friend; or when offered by a foreign authority, in protocol cases where there is reciprocity or diplomatic circumstances.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Anti-bribery laws

What anti-bribery laws apply in your jurisdiction that restrict payments or otherwise control the activities of lobbyists or holders of government contracts?

The Clean Company Act establishes civil and administrative liability to companies that carry out any action against the government, for example promising, offering or giving an undue advantage to a public official; manipulating the competitive nature of a public bidding procedure; removing or seeking to remove a bidder by fraud or offering an advantage of any kind; or manipulating the economic and financial balance of the contracts with the government.

Brazil does not have legislation on lobbying. In cases of violation during interaction with the public sector, criminal law sanctions are applied and lobbyists may be convicted of crimes such as corruption and influence peddling.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Revolving door

Are there any controls on public officials entering the private sector after service or becoming lobbyists, or on private-sector professionals being seconded to public bodies?

The Code of Conduct of the High Administration establishes rules limiting public officials' professional activities after their term has been served.

The Code of Conduct of the High Administration determines four months before public officials can be employed elsewhere. It also provides that, after leaving office, a public official cannot:

- advocate on behalf of someone in any matter or business in which he or she took part as a public official; or
- be an adviser on cases based on non-disclosure information about public policies.

Finally, a public official must wait at least four months before:

- accepting proposals to manage or advise companies he or she had engaged with; or
- act on behalf of companies or individuals in any administrative body that he or she had engaged with.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Prohibitions on lobbying

Is it possible to be barred from lobbying or engaging lobbying services? How?

No. Brazil does not have legislation on lobbying services, which means that it is not possible to bar professionals from lobbying. There are ethics and compliance rules that must be observed while contracting and engaging with the public sector. Any violation of these rules during this engagement may be punished by criminal law. For example, there are penalties for influence peddling and corruption.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

RECENT CASES AND SANCTIONS

Recent cases

Analyse any recent high-profile judicial or administrative decisions dealing with the intersection of government relations, lobbying registration and political finance?

The Supreme Court decided that the Senate should install a parliamentary committee of inquiry regarding the covid-19 crisis. During the work of the parliamentary committee there were 20 judicial decisions by the Supreme Court regarding the proceedings of the committee, surpassing the historical average of six. The final report recommended the indictment of 78 people and two companies and was submitted to the General Prosecutor's Office.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

Remedies and sanctions

In cases of non-compliance or failure to register or report, what remedies or sanctions have been imposed?

Reporting is not mandatory in Brazil.

While engaging with public officials, government-relations professionals must observe other applicable laws, such as criminal, anti-corruption, ethics and compliance. However, regarding the registering or reporting of activities, there are no remedies or sanctions to be applied.

Law stated - 13 December 2021

UPDATE AND TRENDS

Key developments of the past year

Are there any emerging trends or hot topics in government relations, lobbying or related law and regulation? Have changes occurred recently or are changes expected in the near future (through either legislation or court decisions) that will have an impact on the practice of government relations or lobbying disclosure?

There have been no recently emerging trends or hot topics.
